Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

This is our second special issue on smart tourism destinations, following from the success of one we delivered for the International Journal of Tourism Cities in 2019 on the marketing and branding aspects of smart tourism cities. This special issue for Sustainability aims to explore the contribution of smart cities in the context of tourism, especially from the perspective of sustainable development.

The call seeks papers from a wide range of disciplines and regions that explore the questions, techniques and dilemmas involved in the sustainable development and management smart cities in the context of tourism—often referred to as smart tourism cities or smart urban tourism destinations—associated with a variety of issues, including the following:

- tourism markets for smart cities;
- smart city tourism resources;
- smart cites and the sharing economy;
- smart city innovations to reduce overtourism in tourism cities;
- local residents' perspectives smart cities in a tourism context;
- smart city tourism governance issues;
- sustainable development issues specific to smart tourism city destinations;
- smart cities and new tourism trends.
