Dear Colleagues,

Sustainability governance (SG) is a strategic approach for connecting strategic objectives to sustainability initiatives, and comprises the dimensions of capability development, regulations, and control (Li et al., 2014; Wang and Sarkis, 2017). This Special Issue aims to identify the important governance–performance relationships that SG can create, and to encourage debate and conversation about this important strategic approach to sustainability.

Recommended topics include, but are not limited to, the following:

Sustainability capability development;

Sustainability regulatory systems;

Sustainability management control systems;

Sustainability as a strategic function;

Sustainability–performance relationships;

Sustainability governance in the supply chain;

Governance of sustainability performance in supply chain;

Sustainability governance in specific industries, such as construction and food;

Interplay between sustainability governance and operations management practices including JIT, lean and agile;

Sustainability governance disclosure.
