Value co-creation is a dynamic process in which enterprises meet customers’ individual needs and realize value sharing among stakeholders through resource integration and value exchange. The potential benefits of value co-creation to business and society have proven to be effective and successful in promoting sustainability. The core of value co-creation is to strengthen the interaction of information and resources with other stakeholders in product/service development.

The Special Issue aims to attract submissions contributing to the technologies, decision-making approaches, and strategies used in value co-creation in product/service development for sustainability:

- Value co-creation strategies and game theory;
- Sustainability evaluation in product/service design;
- Information technologies/platforms for supporting value co-creation;
- Smart product service systems;
- Online text mining and sentiment analysis for product/service development;
- Data-driven product/service development;
- Product/service redesign;
- Smart product design and development;
- Recommender systems.
