Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

Globalization is increasing the economic power of transnational corporations in relation to national governments, but the effects of this gradual shift in global fisheries are largely unknown. There is a need to better understand the dynamics of the capital of fishing companies because the capital behavior, actors and/or firms can significantly impact the fisheries sector around the world.

Despite this substantial body of theoretical work, there are currently few empirical studies that primarily investigate investment in fisheries and the firm-level investment drivers in fisheries. This Special Issue goes beyond the state of the art by collecting scientific papers related but not limited to the following topics:

- Current situation concerning the ownership structure of fishing vessels and the concentration of vessels and quotas,
- Concentration of vessels, quotas, fishing rights and licenses,
- Characterizing local, regional or national notable transactions, and
- Financialization and the role of banks in the fisheries sector.

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

I encourage you to contribute a research or comprehensive review article for consideration for publication in Sustainability, an international Open Access journal which provides an advanced forum for research findings in areas related to sustainability and sustainable development. The journal publishes original research articles, reviews, conference proceedings (peer-reviewed full articles) and communications. I am confident you will find the journal contributes to enhancing understanding of sustainability and fostering initiatives and applications of sustainability-based measures and activities.
