Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue seeks to explore the opportunity, development, and application of new technologies to promote responsible consumption, environmental preservation, and corporate social responsibility. As firms respond to growing market demand for sustainable products with high quality and increased pressure to have a positive reputation for environmental performance and social responsibility, there are significant opportunities for innovation.

Specific areas of focus may include (but are not limited to):

- Methods and processes to achieve social, economic, and/or ecologic quality;
- New methods and technologies for resource-effective manufacturing processes;
- Methods for assessing the maturity of processes and products regarding quality and/or sustainability;
- Product and process innovation in development and production of sustainable products;
- Reliability engineering to enhance sustainability of products;
- Human factors and qualification of employees;
- Organizational transformation;
- Open development and collaboration for efficient resource allocation.
