Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

Teleworking is a term used to describe work that is performed remotely, rather than from a fixed office or place of employment. It dates back to the mid-1970s and the early work of Jack Nilles.

The purpose of this Special Issue is to offer critical analysis, of a range of the sustainability benefits that have been experienced as a result of the sudden increase in teleworking, and propose how these benefits might be maintained long after pandemic restrictions have been lifted.

Potential topics include, but are not restricted to, how increased telework has impacted:

- Non-essential work travel;
- Greenhouse gas emissions and air quality;
- Urban congestion and transport planning;
- Energy and water use;
- Regionalisation and changes in settlement patterns;
- Resilient utilities and infrastructure;
- Urban planning and preferred urban form;
- Housing and amenities;
- Health and wellbeing risks and benefits;
- Socio-economic equity;
- Gender equality;
- Work-life balance;
- Jobs, productivity and innovation;
- Road safety and future mobility.

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

I encourage you to contribute a research or comprehensive review article for consideration for publication in Sustainability, an international Open Access journal which provides an advanced forum for research findings in areas related to sustainability and sustainable development. The journal publishes original research articles, reviews, conference proceedings (peer-reviewed full articles) and communications. I am confident you will find the journal contributes to enhancing understanding of sustainability and fostering initiatives and applications of sustainability-based measures and activities.
