Message from the Guest Editors

We can satisfy human needs and achieve certain levels of wellbeing in a sustainable way. In this vein, sustainable behavior has been proven to have a positive effect on both the individual and the environment. The happiest societies are those that have more sustainable behaviors. Hence, participation in sustainable behaviors has a positive effect on both the individual and the environment, making the interactions between both certainly complex.

Understanding wellbeing as a multidimensional element, and as the basis of a relational paradigm with sustainability, we expect to receive papers concerning welfare in any area of social science, considering the effects of sustainable behaviors.
