

Special Issue

Sustainability of the Built Environment: New Approaches to Achieving Global Goals

Message from the Guest Editors

Thus, this Special Issue seeks to compile and disseminate existing knowledge on the subject, aiming to advance regenerative buildings through integrated and passive design strategies, technologies to reduce carbon footprint, energy-efficient measures, and construction proposals with sustainable materials, among other approaches. Submissions are welcome on, but not limited to, the following topics:

- Passive architectural design practices;
- Reintroduction of vernacular construction strategies using contemporary approaches;
- Regenerative design approaches;
- Flexible and adaptative architectural proposes for more responsive buildings;
- Sustainable practices in the long term;
- Bioclimatic solutions for existing buildings;
- Retrofitting strategies for heritage building preservation;
- Indoor environmental quality;
- Energy-efficient measures and low-carbon technologies;
- Essays of sustainable urban communities;
- Tools and methods to support more sustainable built architectural projects and constructions.
