Resilience in Tourism

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue aims to bring together different original contributions of a multidisciplinary nature in which the exceptional recovery capacity of the tourism sector is addressed through individual, organizational and destination resilience. All these contributions will complement and enrich the existing and not-so-abundant literature on the phenomenon of resilience in tourism. In this vein, we would like to invite submissions from researchers who study diverse theoretical perspectives, adopt various empirical approaches, conduct multiple levels of analysis, and conduct qualitative and quantitative experiments on the issue. We welcome submissions from diverse disciplines but are not limited to the following research keywords:

- Resilience;
- Vulnerability and risk;
- Sustainability;
- Destination attractions;
- Destination support;
- Resident support;
- Loyalty;
- Challenges and opportunities;
- Destination adaptation;
- Climate change;
