Special Issue

Agriculture, Land and Farm Management

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue aims to provide a platform for researchers, scientists, academicians, and industry professionals to share their latest findings, methodologies, and innovative approaches related to agriculture, land management, and farm sustainability. We encourage original research articles, review papers, and case studies that address the challenges and opportunities in the aforementioned areas of interest. Suggest themes:

- The optimization of agricultural biomass production and utilization;
- Novel approaches to soil management and conservation;
- Energy balance analysis and optimization at the farm level:
- The environmental impact assessment of agricultural systems;
- The life cycle assessment of agricultural practices;
- The economic viability of sustainable farming practices;
- The integration of precision agriculture technologies for improved resource management.

I look forward to receiving your contributions.
