Policy Frameworks for Sustainable Development: Balancing Energy, Environmental, Social, and Techno Economic Dimensions

Message from the Guest Editors

Sustainable development aims to meet the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs. The objectives of this Special Issue are as follows:

- To explore the concept of sustainable development and its importance for policy/legal frameworks;
- To analyze the challenges and opportunities of balancing environmental, social, and economic dimensions in policy frameworks;
- To highlight the best practices in policy frameworks that can lead to sustainable development;
- To examine the role of stakeholders in policy formulation and implementation for sustainable development;
- To provide an avenue for the dissemination of research findings, practical experiences, and policy innovations that promote sustainable development.

We welcome contributions from scholars and practitioners across various disciplines, including but not limited to economics, public policy, environmental studies, sociology, geography, and political science. We will also consider papers that incorporate diverse methodological approaches, including quantitative, qualitative, and mixed-methods research. We look forward to receiving your contributions.
