Sustainable Heritage Tourism

Message from the Guest Editors

In the context of tourism promotion, sustainability is now a fundamental dimension for both the management and enhancement of cultural and territorial heritage. The fundamental objective of this Special Issue is therefore to present tourism or rather "tourisms" as practices and tools for accessing and enjoying tangible and intangible heritage, in particular with regard to respect for the environment in which these activities take place. Aiming for tourism that is more respectful of cultural heritage and the environment in general, based on the awareness that sustainability is a necessity, is a responsibility and at the same time an opportunity for growth for the entire tourism industry and for current and future generations, who must be taught a transversal model of sustainability (environmental, economic and social) that allows us to build a more sustainable world in the future through responsible individual and collective choices. This Special Issue therefore intends to collect a series of proposals from scholars who can offer proposals for implementing more environmentally friendly forms of tourism.
