Traditional Water Management Systems as Living Cultural Heritage in a Changing World

Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues: This Special Issue calls for contributions that highlight the value of endangered heritage with centuries-old development in relation to the following (non-exclusive) list of topics: (i) the transformation of natural and cultural landscapes in line with the introduction of water harvesting and management systems; (ii) quantitative approaches evaluating the efficiency of such systems; (iii) interdisciplinary research considering social and socio-economic aspects of water harvesting and water management systems; (iv) trajectories of change for future climate and land use scenarios; and (v) traditional knowledge related to these systems. We look forward to receiving your contributions.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

I encourage you to contribute a research or comprehensive review article for consideration for publication in Sustainability, an international open access journal which provides an advanced forum for research findings in areas related to sustainability and sustainable development. The journal publishes original research articles, reviews, conference proceedings (peer reviewed full articles) and communications. I am confident you will find the journal contributes to enhancing understanding of sustainability and fostering initiatives and applications of sustainability-based measures and activities.
