

Special Issue

Present and Future Perspectives of Landscape and Urban Horticulture as Urban Regeneration Practices

Message from the Guest Editors

For this Special Issue, we welcome conceptual and empirical studies, as well as theoretical or realized projects, that propose concrete actions to promote landscape and urban horticulture in modern cities, highlighting scopes and benefits that they could provide both to the urban food system and urban regeneration. Papers can be submitted in the broader research area of landscape and urban horticulture. However, articles that focus on the below topics are encouraged:

- Ecosystem services provided by urban agriculture practices;
- Urban horticulture as new green infrastructure;
- Climate change mitigation and adaptation through landscape and urban horticulture practices;
- Water and waste management;
- Circular design processes;
- Integration of agricultural practices in and on buildings;
- Social, environmental, and economic innovations achieved through urban farming initiatives.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

I encourage you to contribute a research or comprehensive review article for consideration for publication in Sustainability, an international open access journal which provides an advanced forum for research findings in areas related to sustainability and sustainable development. The journal publishes original research articles, reviews, conference proceedings (peer reviewed full articles) and communications. I am confident you will find the journal contributes to enhancing understanding of sustainability and fostering initiatives and applications of sustainability-based measures and activities.
