

Special Issue

Crises and the Sharing Economy

Message from the Guest Editors

This special issue aims to collect (quantitative/qualitative) empirical and theoretical research contributions on how (economic, natural/environmental, political, and social) crises have affected the manifold plethora of actors connected to the sharing economy and its collaborative platforms. Scientific contributions will be accepted in the areas of (but not limited to):

- Management strategies to face crises affecting the sharing economy;
- Behavioural changes in collaborative consumption;
- Trends and challenges in the environmental and economic sustainability of sharing economy platforms;
- Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and the sharing economy;
- Governance, policy, and regulation issues in the sharing economy;
- Disruptions and business model innovation in the sharing economy;
- Technology- and data-driven impacts on collaborative economy platforms;
- Emerging opportunities in the sharing economy.
