

Special Issue

Green Buildings, Energy Efficiency, and Sustainable Development

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue is focused on innovative research and advancements in sustainable building practices, specifically targeting green buildings, energy efficiency, and sustainable development. The aim is to gather together scientific work that explores practical solutions, cutting-edge technology, and policy initiatives in green architecture, energy systems, and sustainable development in eco-friendly architecture. The purpose of this Special Issue is to present a coherent collection of articles that provide both theoretical perspectives and practical applications for green buildings and energy efficiency as considered factors of sustainable development. Presenting diverse perspectives and methods, the Special Issue will complement the existing literature, informing academic researchers, industry practitioners, and urban planners, and providing recommendations for integrating sustainable solutions.
