Ecosocial Work and Sustainability

Message from the Guest Editors

Papers could focus on social work practice as it relates to the following themes:

- Initiatives that seek to expand international cooperation and capacity-building of local communities to support access to safe and affordable drinking water for marginalised and impoverished communities, including water harvesting, desalination, water efficiency, wastewater treatment, recycling and reuse technologies
- Work that seeks to protect and restore water-related ecosystems, including mountains, forests, wetlands, rivers, aquifers and lakes, as well as social work practice that seeks to improve water quality by reducing pollution, eliminating dumping and minimizing release of hazardous chemicals and materials
- Programs that supports women and girls in vulnerable situations to access adequate and equitable sanitation

Work that promotes indigenous initiatives and world views as related to water and sanitation, clean energy, responsible and sustainable production and consumption, industry and innovation, life below water and life on earth.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

I encourage you to contribute a research or comprehensive review article for consideration for publication in Sustainability, an international open access journal which provides an advanced forum for research findings in areas related to sustainability and sustainable development. The journal publishes original research articles, reviews, conference proceedings (peer reviewed full articles) and communications. I am confident you will find the journal contributes to enhancing understanding of sustainability and fostering initiatives and applications of sustainability-based measures and activities.
