Future Landscapes: Opportunities and Challenges Seen from the Perspective of Resilient and Sustainable Landscapes

Message from the Guest Editors

Future pattern and functioning of landscapes are mostly determined by human activities regarding the past and current human and nature interactions, landscape change and vulnerability of landscapes to current and future stressors in coupled socio-ecological systems. We envisage this Special Issue becoming a cornerstone of the literature, providing a platform for researchers from all disciplines and various fields for sharing the knowledge and methodology on the main challenges, opportunities and future directions for enhancing landscape resilience and sustainability.
