Human Mobility and Sustainability in Time of Pandemic

Message from the Guest Editor

We propose to cover a broad spectrum of original research contributions that intertwine human mobility and sustainability: the pandemic's impact on refugees' sustainable inclusion; economic and social consequences of human mobility restrictions under COVID-19; mobility behavior of EU citizens in the time of the pandemic; mobility and sustainable health systems; resilience and sustainability; transient mobility and sustainable agriculture; COVID-19 and public transport; the reconstruction of a sustainable tourism infrastructure that facilitates human mobility; social distance and impact on sustainability; inequality in mobility; sustainable borders; social distance and contribution of migrants to a sustainable economy; new forms of sustainable (in) mobility; digitalization of work; and other (im)mobility and sustainability.
