

Special Issue

Inclusive Cultural Heritage Tourism

Message from the Guest Editor

This special issue on 'Inclusive Cultural Heritage Tourism' aims to increase understanding about current policies and practice, and to explore potential future approaches regarding inclusive tourism, especially in developing countries. Papers that address this topic from perspectives of culture and heritage, communities (including marginalised communities), urban and rural spaces, human rights and employment, are invited. As policy-informing research in this area is fragmented, generally located within disciplinary silos, it is expected that by publishing relevant research from different disciplines this special issue will provide a more comprehensive picture of current policies and practice, and contribute to developing innovative policies and practice for inclusive tourism.
