Lighting the Way for Retail Design: Interactions, Trade-Offs and ROI's

Message from the Guest Editors

In many countries, even before the mandatory closing of shops during the global pandemic of the SARS-CoV-2 virus, the retail sector was facing considerable challenges with the growth of e-commerce, economic crises, environmental concerns, and the changing nature of consumers' behaviors and attitudes. Nevertheless, for many retailers, the physical store still has the potential to be (or to become) a crucial touchpoint in the interaction with their consumers, on the condition that it has the necessary functional, clearly distinctive, and brand-coherent qualities and is able to establish an emotional connection with the target market. Within this context, lighting as a design aspect is an especially interesting component.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

I encourage you to contribute a research or comprehensive review article for consideration for publication in Sustainability, an international open access journal which provides an advanced forum for research findings in areas related to sustainability and sustainable development. The journal publishes original research articles, reviews, conference proceedings (peer reviewed full articles) and communications. I am confident you will find the journal contributes to enhancing understanding of sustainability and fostering initiatives and applications of sustainability-based measures and activities.
