Local and Regional Development in the Conditions of Globalisation

Message from the Guest Editors

As living conditions, wellbeing, and life chances are unequally distributed across time and space, regional and local development remains the focus of both researchers and policy makers. Hence, discovering the sources of prosperity of some places and the hardships of the others, as well as designing the policies and instruments that stimulate economic development are robust and ambitious tasks even more. We invite conceptual, theoretical, and empirical papers that include the following:

- provide critical appraisals of the regional and local development processes influenced by globalization;
- present various manifestations of globalization at a local and regional level;
- demonstrate regional or local resilience/vulnerability in relation to global disturbances;
- reflect upon policy instruments that allow for disadvantaged areas to benefit from globalization.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

I encourage you to contribute a research or comprehensive review article for consideration for publication in Sustainability, an international Open Access journal which provides an advanced forum for research findings in areas related to sustainability and sustainable development. Sustainability publishes original research articles, review articles and communications. I am confident you will find the journal contributes to enhancing understanding of sustainability and fostering initiatives and applications of sustainability-based measures and activities.
