

Special Issue

Landscape Architecture, Urban Design, and Interdisciplinary Urbanism

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue, “Landscape Architecture, Urban Design, and Interdisciplinary Urbanism”, seeks to explore the evolving role of urban and landscape design in creating sustainable, inclusive, and resilient urban environments. As cities face increasing challenges due to climate change, socio-political shifts, and rapid urbanization, the intersection of landscape architecture, urban design, and interdisciplinary urbanism becomes critical in shaping adaptable and future-proof cities. The Special Issue aims to achieve the following objectives:

- Investigate the role of landscape architecture and urban design in fostering sustainability, resilience, and livability in urban spaces.
- Explore interdisciplinary approaches to urbanism, including the integration of emerging technologies, ecological planning, and participatory design methods.
- Bridge theory and practice by featuring case studies, comparative research, and experimental methodologies that advance contemporary urban sustainability.
