Special Issue

Plants and Habitats in Changing World: New Data for Climate Change Interpretation and Sustainable Management

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue aims to gather new floristic and vegetational data, as well as to provide updates and reviews to facilitate a better interpretation of ongoing changes. The included articles will address a wide range of topics, including changes in the distribution of plant species, plant responses to climate change, conservation, and management strategies for habitats. Therefore, we invite researchers, scholars, and professionals in the field to contribute their studies and research to this Special Issue, to enrich scientific knowledge, and to provide a solid foundation for environmental sustainability policies. In this Special Issue, original research articles and reviews are welcome. Research areas may include (but are not limited to) the following:

- Geographic plants and habitats distribution;
- Alien and invasive species;
- Plant ecology;
- Synecology;
- Bio-indicators;
- Endangered plants and habitats;
- Neglected plants and habitats;
- Environmental dynamics and management;
- Environmental protection and recovery:
- Habitats assessment and restoration.

We look forward to receiving your contributions.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

I encourage you to contribute a research or comprehensive review article for consideration for publication in Sustainability, an international Open Access journal which provides an advanced forum for research findings in areas related to sustainability and sustainable development. Sustainability publishes original research articles, review articles and communications. I am confident you will find the journal contributes to enhancing understanding of sustainability and fostering initiatives and applications of sustainability-based measures and activities.
