Social Innovation and Sustainability

Message from the Guest Editors

The concept of social innovation has been gaining visibility in the media, in the formulation of national and global public policies, in the management of third-sector organizations, and in academia (Weber, 2012; Dainienė & Dagilienė, 2016), but it is still a theme for which there is a profound need for research, covering both the concept and associated practices, as well as their results. According to Jessop, Bob, Moulaert et al. (2013), social innovation is a hot topic, appears regularly in the news, and is part of the core of the essential programs of several international organizations; for example, it is present in the UN's Sustainable Development Goals (Eichler & Schwarz, 2019), the European Union's innovation-related incentive programs, and the OECD's social entrepreneurship programs...
