The Sustainable Trade Issues and Policies

Message from the Guest Editors

Global trade is slowly becoming the key aspect of the global economy agenda. Its character, structure, and different stakeholders have made international trade activities an extremely specific and difficult part of the economic agenda of any country around the world. The global economy has become so interconnected that important trends and events in one region can have substantial effects on the opposite side of the globe. Global economic tendencies refers to current issues of the global economy that shape the future economy. We can liken global economic tendencies to Brexit and Donald Trump policy directions. It is also possible to see the effort of many countries, especially EU members seeking to protect the living environment and to make global economy and trade more sustainable. A classic example of such efforts is the so-called “Green Deal” and “Farm to Fork Policy” introduced by EU authorities in 2019. According to the new EU vision, it is necessary to pay attention to production conditions of imports coming to the EU market...
