Socio-Cultural Perspective for Martial Arts Tourism and Motor Recreation Research

Message from the Guest Editors

The current challenge for science in the field of leisure time activity research is to practice it as a new paradigm (Cynarski, 2014). Therefore, non-reductionist approaches should be adopted, taking into account the coexistence of many aspects of human personality and social life (contextual, temporal, processual). It is crucial to go beyond the boundaries of individual disciplines when many issues require interdisciplinary approaches. Here the scientific framework should be quite widefrom cultural anthropology, through various sociological sub-disciplines, to theories of tourism and recreation or theories of martial arts. We can focus more generally on the role of heritage in the field of physical culture, as demonstrated by martial arts. On the other hand, we are interested in using this potential in physical recreation as a free-time activity, which is the advantage of the tourist role. Let the third field of scientific search be the search for the theoretical concepts that best serve the description and explanation of various forms of tourism, of people practicing martial arts or those who are more passively interested in them.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

I encourage you to contribute a research or comprehensive review article for consideration for publication in Sustainability, an international open access journal which provides an advanced forum for research findings in areas related to sustainability and sustainable development. The journal publishes original research articles, reviews, conference proceedings (peer reviewed full articles) and communications. I am confident you will find the journal contributes to enhancing understanding of sustainability and fostering initiatives and applications of sustainability-based measures and activities.
