Locally Oriented Sustainable Design Studies

Message from the Guest Editor

Today, we recognize that global sustainability is necessary for human beings to survive long-term on the Earth. A sustainable society implies sufficient wellbeing and a lower environmental impact. Although it is to be achieved in all regions or countries appropriately, its implications are different region-by-region, for example, not only in western and northern countries but also eastern and southern countries. Region- or local-specific issues are also regarded as one of the concerns of sustainable consumption and production (SCP). More details at:
