Special Issue

Research on Sustainable Ecommerce and Supply Chain Management

Message from the Guest Editor

E-commerce refers to the buying and selling of goods or services via the Internet. As e-commerce has continued to grow, many environmental and social concerns have arisen. For instance, e-commerce packaging uses materials that are harmful to the environment and contributes to huge amounts of waste; the logistics (e.g., the last-mile delivery) generates air and noise pollution; online data transmission and storage pose new challenges for privacy protection and security; and the combination of new business models and an unclear legal environment can result in labor rights violations. Besides having to ensure economic performance, ecommerce managers must take into account the natural environment and society and must know how to implement sustainable practices. The aim of this Special Issue of Sustainability is to provide researchers with a platform to discuss sustainability issues in the context of e-commerce and supply chains management in order to help e-commerce managers work in a sustainable manner. We look forward to receiving your contributions.
