Sustainability in Cities and Campuses

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue “Sustainability in Cities and Campuses” aims at collecting high-quality works about implementations, case studies, higher education courses, researches and new trends that qualify Universities and Cities as a driver to sustainable development from a multidisciplinary perspective: cultural, technical, economic, social, environmental. It is a matter of fact that in the last three years the COVID-19 pandemic crisis has had a huge impact on the lifestyle change of both cities and university campuses. Numerous solutions to the various economic, social and environmental problems related to sustainability have arisen from this crisis. SI also intends to collect contributions relating to experiences, case studies, research, and anything else that has been done to overcome the pandemic crisis, to prevent future crises and, in any case, to make cities and campuses more resilient.
