

Special Issue

Supply Chain Management and International Trade

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue focuses on the broad topic of research methods and techniques for supply chain modeling, trade flows analysis, and strategic supply chain optimization. Empirical and theoretical articles dealing with issues such as the modeling and analysis of a supply chain network, international operations management, supply risk management, and the role of a supply chain in international trade flows are welcome. In addition, research topics in the field of digitalization of supply chains also play an important role in this special issue. Novel scientific contributions focusing on the measurement of the future impacts of digitalization on sustainable supply chain, supply chain efficiency, supply chain resilience, supply chain integration, and performance by applying mathematical and econometric modeling are encouraged. Keywords

- sustainable supply chain
- supply chain management
- international trade
- global value chains
- supply chain performance
