The Role of Digital Technologies in Sustainable Education

Message from the Guest Editor

Original research articles and reviews are welcome. Research areas may include (but are not limited to) the following:

- critical reflection on the role and use of specific digital technologies and their applications in sustainable education;
- innovative digital technologies (e.g., artificial intelligence) and their applications in sustainable education;
- assessed examples of digital technologies used by educational institutions in the context of sustainability;
- identification of promoters and repressors in the implementation of sustainable education;
- new theoretical models or adaptation of existing models (e.g., TAM, UTAUT, TPACK) as predictors of actual behaviour of specific populations related to the topic;
- sustainable teaching practises supported by digital technologies;
- sustainable management practises supported by digital technologies in the context of the theme;
- curriculum issues linking digital technologies and sustainable education;
- green schools and campuses;
- digitally supported renovations of historic buildings.
