

Special Issue

Cleaner and Sustainable Industry

Message from the Guest Editors

Cleaner production is a concept that aims to manufacture cleaner products and to achieve environmental-friendly processes and services by reducing the environmental impacts while increasing the efficiency in the use of energy, water, and natural and human resources. Although a considerable number of authors have addressed issues related to cleaner production and sustainability assessment in the industry, substantial room for improvement remains. Consequently, the aim of this Special Issue is to cover gaps in the current knowledge about cleaner production and sustainability in industry, especially in the manufacturing, construction and energy sectors, sharing case studies, problems, solutions, new methodologies, techniques and tools, as well as novel ideas and technologies that help to achieve the transition to a cleaner and more sustainable world.
