

Special Issue

Sustainable Construction Project and Program Management

Message from the Guest Editors

It is known that there are considerable differences in the principles and methods between project and program management. An in-depth understanding of these differences and their systematic application will create synergies that can simultaneously improve performance of project and program management for sustainable construction. Thus, this special issue invites original papers dealing with theoretical and practical aspects of project and program management for sustainable construction. Topics of the special issue can include the following specific issues, but not limited to:

- Sustainable Project and Program management
- PDRI and PgDRI for sustainable Construction
- Information and Communication Technologies for Project and Program Management
- Digital Twin for Project and Program Management
- Simulation and Optimization
- Case Studies/Best practices
- Human and Organizational Issues
- Conceptual or Comparative Approaches
- Mathematical Modelling and Statistical Analysis
