Corporate Social Responsibility Disclosure Research – Sustainability Perspective

Message from the Guest Editors

It is stated that corporate social responsibility (CSR) and CSR disclosure have emerged together. It can be inferred that CSR is about the commitment of companies' social and environmental concerns in their business operations beyond their legal obligations.

Companies employ a range of different reporting tools to transmit their CSR initiatives to stakeholders, such as social and thematic reports, codes of conduct, websites, stakeholders' consultations, internal channels, prizes and events, and cause-related marketing in order to present intangible assets and non-financial issues to stakeholders. Improved awareness of sustainability issues has been reflected on the increased development of sustainable disclosure guidelines and standards in order to inform customers, investors, suppliers, policy makers, and other stakeholders regarding a company's commitment toward sustainable development...
