

Special Issue

Determinants, Components and Impacts of Sustainable Governance

Message from the Guest Editors

By sustainable governance we refer to a governance founded on sustainability paradigms, presenting all the characteristics and components suitable for generating long-term sustainable value and representing itself a first element of evaluation. This Special Issue of Sustainability will comprise a collection of empirical and theoretical studies covering a wide range of themes related to sustainable governance. We encourage submissions that address issues related (but not limited) to the following main topics:

- Corporate governance for sustainability
- ESG and corporate governance
- Determinants and antecedents of sustainable governance
- Measurement and indicators of sustainable governance
- Components and characteristics of sustainable governance
- Impacts of sustainable governance on capital markets and financial performance
- Sustainable governance and disclosure
- Sustainable governance and risk management, audit procedures, and anticorruption strategies
- Sustainable governance in specific industries or in specific geographical areas
- Sustainable governance in specific settings such as family businesses, listed and unlisted companies, and SMEs
