Special Issue

Digital Supply Chain and Disruptive Technologies

Message from the Guest Editors

The primary research scope and focus of this Special Issue includes, but is not limited to, the following:

- Emerging use cases for the innovative adoption of disruptive technologies in supply chains and logistics;
- Integrative use of both established (e.g., cloud computing, ERP systems) and emerging digital technologies (e.g., artificial intelligence, Internet of Things, cloud computing, and blockchain) and their impact on firm/organizational performance and innovation;
- Technology-led organizational and user behavioral changes within and between supply chain organizations;
- Theory building and/or testing in the context of disruptive technology diffusion within the context of logistics and supply chain;
- Theorization of the digital transformation of logistics and supply chains under radical uncertainties such as during the COVID-19 pandemic;
- Innovative business models and concepts enabled by digital technology, such as circular economy.
