Role of Smart eHealth and eCare Technologies in the Age of Pandemics

Message from the Guest Editor

The year 2020 proved to be something nobody expected. We have faced a global pandemic, experienced social distancing, seen overcrowded hospitals, death, fear, and grief. Additionally, the world economy has seen huge challenges. Supporting mental, physical, and social well-being has increasingly become a global focus. During these challenging circumstances, the role of smart eHealth and eCare technologies has increased extensively. This Special Issue will offer a forum for spreading best practices, including some of the latest technological advances and ideas for lowering risk, promoting health, and maintaining the quality of life during pandemics, with the help of modern technologies and digital services. This Special Issue takes a unique multidisciplinary approach to the topic, with special attention to smart technologies and digital services. We, therefore, invite research articles, review, and viewpoint manuscripts devoted to various applications of smart eHealth and eCare technologies focused on enhancing holistic well-being during pandemics.
