

Special Issue

Communication and Education on Sustainable Architecture and Urbanism

Message from the Guest Editors

This issue focuses on articles that discuss experiences, as well as multidisciplinary and cross-sectional research that is related to communication and education for sustainable development in the areas of architecture and urbanism. Articles may discuss creative new and innovative ways of communication and education. The focus can be on the integration of sustainability issues in educational programs of institutions on different levels. Included may be the training of architects, town planners, and urban designers, as well as stakeholders involved in sustainable building and urbanization processes in a wider context. Addressed may be approaches to improve communication and understanding among different sectors and programs, and at various scales and in specific contexts. Potential aims can be related to the creation of more integrated, solid, and effective frameworks for action in order to achieve sustainable development.
