Education for Sustainable Development: Advancing in Education for Citizenship

Message from the Guest Editors

The purpose of education is the complex acquisition of knowledge. Therefore, in the current situation of environmental crises, developing an education that ensures the protection of the environment and sustainable development is of great importance to the development of society itself, and strives towards achieving citizenship with environmental values. In this Special Issue, we encourage researchers to submit research articles or empirical, theoretical and methodological reviews in various fields that consider the development of educational actions within the frameworks of both formal and non-formal education from the perspective of sustainable development, the environment, or civic education. Submissions using qualitative, mixed methods, or quantitative research approaches are welcome. Keywords

- sustainable development
- biodiversity
- SDGs
- education
- climate change

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

I encourage you to contribute a research or comprehensive review article for consideration for publication in Sustainability, an international open access journal which provides an advanced forum for research findings in areas related to sustainability and sustainable development. The journal publishes original research articles, reviews, conference proceedings (peer reviewed full articles) and communications. I am confident you will find the journal contributes to enhancing understanding of sustainability and fostering initiatives and applications of sustainability-based measures and activities.
