Effects of Home-Based Exercise Rehabilitation Program

Message from the Guest Editor

The topic of this Special Issue is exercise prescription in chronic diseases—one of the most important fields of research interest in sports medicine. Particularly, the “home-based programs” are addressed to restore a correct lifestyle in order to reduce the negative impact of the cardiovascular risk factors, particularly in non-communicable chronic disease. This is possible in an unsupervised form by planning and allowing exercise programs, with the exclusion of constant exercise supervision, avoiding an excessive medicalization. Many strategies can be advised for appropriate and specific training in all individuals. Authors are invited to submit papers about exercise evaluation and prescription in patients, healthy subjects, and athletes submitted to exercise prescription therapy.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

I encourage you to contribute a research or comprehensive review article for consideration for publication in Sustainability, an international open access journal which provides an advanced forum for research findings in areas related to sustainability and sustainable development. The journal publishes original research articles, reviews, conference proceedings (peer reviewed full articles) and communications. I am confident you will find the journal contributes to enhancing understanding of sustainability and fostering initiatives and applications of sustainability-based measures and activities.
