Pro-environmental Behaviors and Green Practices

Message from the Guest Editors

Scientific contributions will be accepted within the following six priority areas for promoting pro-environmental behaviors and green practices:

- Effective strategies or practices for promoting scientific research, policy, media, and interpersonal communication concerning climate change.
- Effective strategies or practices for leveraging social norms to facilitate collective efforts toward adaption and mitigation.
- Effective strategies or practices for leveraging motivation to support sustainable development goals.
- Application of modern technologies (such as information and communication technology, big data analysis, artificial intelligence, and robotics technology) for environmental and green education.
- Use of modern technologies for enhancing engagement in sustainability at various levels (e.g., the global, state, local, organizational, societal, and individual levels).
- Innovative or interdisciplinary approaches to promote pro-environmental behaviours and green practices.
