

Special Issue

Environmental Protection: “Doing Good and Avoiding Bad”. A Multi-Disciplinary Thinking to Change Our Minds

Message from the Guest Editors

This call for papers explores the relationship between environmental issues and human behaviour in a social context. Social sciences applied to environmental research are not purely theoretic fields but rather include much applied theory and research on how people think about and respond to environmental challenges (to give some examples: water shortage, energy demand, global warming, food security, or waste management).
