Green Consumption and Sustainable Marketing

Message from the Guest Editors

Recently, there has been much discussion about sustainable development. Societies recognize the importance of environmental quality and the social benefits of economic prosperity. Accordingly, more companies are adopting green practices to reach everincreasing environmentally aware consumers. We encourage scholars to provide a synthesis and critical assessment of green consumption and sustainable marketing literature. In addition, this Special Issue solicits research studies with actionable advice for either for-profit or non-profit organizations that seek to thrive in a sharing economy. We welcome qualitative (including case studies) and quantitative work that advances our understanding of how businesses are creating positive change by satisfying and creating new demand for sustainable products/services.
