

Special Issue

Nature Conservation in Sustainability - Series II

Message from the Guest Editors

As nature protection is one of the main pillars of sustainable development, we are organizing a Special Issue titled “Nature Conservation in Sustainability - Series II”. This Special Issue intends to deepen our knowledge of in situ and ex situ nature conservation and its implications for sustainability. It aims to provide an innovative and reliable source of scientific information for researchers, policymakers, and land managers by gathering relevant studies on various aspects of nature conservation. The Special Issue welcomes studies including original research articles, case studies, and reviews from a wide range of disciplines, including theoretical ecology, landscape ecology, restoration ecology, ecological modeling, among others, provided that there are a clear connection and immediate relevance to nature conservation. Manuscripts devoted to a wide spectrum of organisms ranging from microorganisms and fungi to higher plants and animals as well as to varied levels of biological organization ranging from individuals and populations through ecosystems and landscapes to biomes and biosphere are welcome.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

I encourage you to contribute a research or comprehensive review article for consideration for publication in Sustainability, an international open access journal which provides an advanced forum for research findings in areas related to sustainability and sustainable development. The journal publishes original research articles, reviews, conference proceedings (peer reviewed full articles) and communications. I am confident you will find the journal contributes to enhancing understanding of sustainability and fostering initiatives and applications of sustainability-based measures and activities.
