Rethinking Sustainability in Human Resource Management

Message from the Guest Editors

This special issue aims at inviting to rethink Human Resource Management (HRM), with a particular interest in sustainable HRM.

- How have recent developments affected creativity, innovation, motivation, social isolation, stress and work-life balance?
- Will we see a more sustainable future via homeworking, online meetings, and less commuting? How will it affect the social aspects of work?
- How is the relationship between managers and employees affected by recent developments?

Theoretical, conceptual, and empirical articles on new and innovative approaches to sustainable HRM are welcome.
