Changing Economic Opportunities Across the Rural-Urban Continuum: From Remote Agricultural Regions to Large Cities

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue aims to shed multiple lights on these developments: what is the role of the urban structure on the economic and social dynamics of peripheral areas? How will changes in entrepreneurship/small-business development and household/business location preferences affect rural economic development, especially in a post-COVID-19 world? Likewise, how does environmental quality impact the spatial distribution of jobs given that climate change policies will likely be implemented with heightened urgency? For instance, do strict environmental policies sufficiently support household quality of life, offsetting any negative effects from restrictions on extractive sectors?
