Social Sustainability in Business from a Gender Perspective

Message from the Collection Editors

Social sustainability has five dimensions that should be considered when determining if a business or project is socially sustainable: equity, diversity, social cohesion, quality of life, democracy and governance. In this Special Issue, we invite papers that cover those dimensions from a gender perspective in different sectors (tourism and ICT, among other sectors), addressing topics including (but not limited to):

Equity:

Gender balance and equality at workplaces;
Working conditions/arrangements and gendered impacts;

Work-life balance;

Promoting decent work and economic growth.

Diversity:

Gender diversity management.

Social cohesion:

Social leadership, empowerment and gender.

Quality of life:

Promoting employees' (psycho-socio and physical) health and well-being at work.

Democracy and governance:

Community engagement and volunteerism;

Corporate sustainability (CSR).

Other topics regarding gender:

“Doing gender” through social, pro-environmental and ethical actions, attitudes and values (consumption, responsible investment etc.);

The gender impacts of the COVID-19 pandemic on social sustainability in business.
