

Special Issue

Sustainable Corporate Governance and Innovation

Message from the Guest Editors

The aim of this Special Issue is to cast light on the relevance of corporate governance in the creation of value for firms through the development of innovative initiatives.

This Special Issue welcomes a wide variety of academic disciplines encompassing numerous methodological approaches that will contribute to the existing literature by shedding some light on the role of corporate governance in innovation. In particular, we encourage submissions that address issues related (but not limited) to the following main topics: Boards of directors and R&D intensity.

Boards of directors and social and environmental innovation.

Sustainability committees and environmental innovation. Managerial incentives and decisions about corporate innovation.

The role of institutional investors in corporate innovation.

The capital market's reactions to boards' decisions about innovation.

Corporate governance and innovation in emerging countries.

Literature reviews regarding corporate governance and innovation.
