

Special Issue

Navigating the Evolving Sustainability Landscape in Healthcare

Message from the Guest Editors

For this Special Issue, we are interested in research that investigates sustainability approaches, as well as develops a sustainability knowledge base. The Special Issue will examine different sustainability aspects to support healthcare organizations and researchers to better understand the various perspectives, applications, and constructs within approaches guiding healthcare sustainability initiatives. We are looking for research that can benefit both practitioners and academicians. We welcome experimental and theoretical research on various sustainability aspects. Research may employ a myriad of research design methods, including, but not limited to, multivariate regression analysis, machine learning, in-depth case studies, system change approach or policy-oriented research. Keywords: green healthcare; sustainable healthcare; ESG investment; blockchain in healthcare; machine learning in healthcare; healthcare carbon footprints; COVID-19 on sustainability; sustainability of healthcare facilities.
